PREFACE

The following bomb damage assessment report is based on a review of post-strike Mission [REDACTED], dated [REDACTED], covering the Plaine des Jarres area, Laos.

25X1A

25X1D

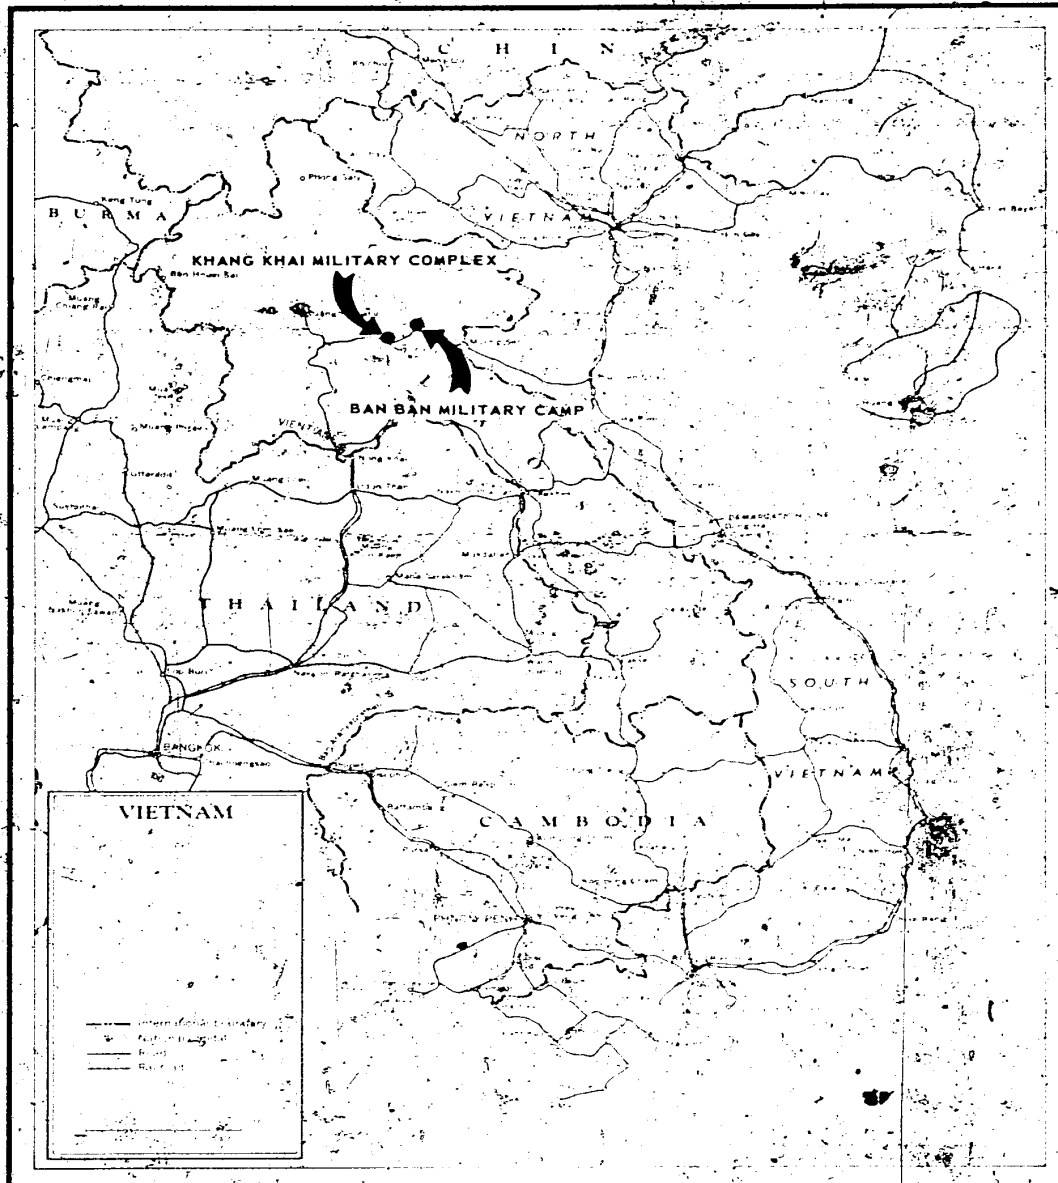

The bomb crater and rocket damage tabulation for the Khang Khai military complex is based upon distance and direction from a road junction of route 7 and an unnumbered route located in the center of the Khang Khai military complex at 19-28-55N 103-15-25E, UTM UG174551. Pre-strike and post-strike photos on Khang Khai are Attachments 1 and 2, respectively. Pre-reported strike and post-reported strike photos on Ban Ban are Attachments 3 and 4, respectively.

Khang Khai Military Complex is located along route 7 in the Plaine des Jarres area. It consists of a military barracks area, a military headquarters area, a small civilian community, and several other miscellaneous areas. In and around the military complex are numerous strongpoints, positions, training areas, and miscellaneous trenching. See attachment 1.

Khang Khai Military Complex was reportedly attacked by one T-28-type aircraft on 11 June 1964; the amount of expended ordnance was, reportedly, one 250-pound bomb and 4 rockets, size unknown. Two large administration-type buildings in the military headquarters area were severely damaged, one by a blast from a bomb whose crater is rubble filled and one by fire, to the extent that they are probably unusable. In the military barracks area one administration-type building and 3 barracks were completely destroyed by fire, probably caused by rocket hits. One additional barracks has sustained some roof damage, but is probably still usable. No additional bomb craters have been identified, and there is no other apparent damage to other facilities or equipment within the complex. See attachment 2.

** Observed blast damage.

The village of Ban Ban and the Ban Ban Military Camp at 10-39N 103-33E were reviewed for evidence of reported bomb and rocket attack and the results were negative. See attachments 3 and 4. A review of the area along route 7 between Khang Khai Military Complex and Ban Ban Military Camp was also conducted with the following preliminary results:

In the vicinity of Ban Ken, 19-35N 103-40E, and 6.7 nm ESE of Ban Ban, 8 small bomb craters are observed as follows from Ban Ken:

Two on northern edge, four are .2 nm-ESE, and two are .4 ne ESE.

There was no apparent damage resulting from these bombs; however, their apparent objectives were occupied AAA positions and a road bridge on route 7 in the general vicinity of Ban Ken.
